

SPRING FORWARD

UPSTAIRS GALLERY, OFFICE, LAUNDRY, SIDE STAIR HALL | STEPHANIE JARVIS

When it came to connecting the long corridor's gallery and office, vestibule and laundry room, decorator Stephanie Jarvis had a spring in her step—literally. “The show-house theme of ‘Spring’ sparked the inspiration. I love that transition between seasons, where the starkness of winter is punctuated by strong bursts of spring color,” shares Jarvis. Her idea came to life first in the stairwell and study, where she incorporated mineral greens, grays and charcoal colors with a punch of citron yellow, including the magnificent tree drawings by Richard Bowers, photographs of decayed architecture by Hector Sanchez and antiques from Atlanta antiques gallery Parc Monceau. The long hall and vestibule embodied springtime with the likes of a butterfly print and coral, green and white colorways. But the tour de force is the vestibule’s attention-grabbing earthy green wallpaper by Faye Bell of Atlanta Artist Collective. “I adore a memorable wallpaper, especially in small spaces,” she shares. “The ink drawings by Russian artist Slava Roubanov were the icing on the cake.” —Jeanne Lyons Davis
